Black Drivers in D.C. Pay Almost 50% More Than White Drivers, a $326 Average Difference

In their new report on unintentional bias, the District of Columbia Department of Insurance, Securities, and Banking found alarmingly higher premiums charged to

Consumer Product Safety Commission Warns About Dangerous Toys and Online Shopping

By Courtney Griffin, Director of Consumer Product Safety

As shoppers head into the holiday season, it's crucial to remain vigilant about the safety

Black and Hispanic drivers. The study found that, on average, Black drivers pay 46% more than white drivers and Hispanic drivers pay 20% more. According to CFA, one of the likeliest drivers of the price disparities stems from auto insurance companies' use of consumer credit history for premium setting. "The price setting algorithms of insurance companies are broken, and people of color are paying the price," said Michael DeLong, CFA's Research and Advocacy Associate.

What "Make America Healthy Again" Could Mean for America's Food Policy

By Thomas Gremillion, Director of Food Policy

President-electTrump's adoption of Robert F. Kennedy Jr.'s "Make America Healthy Again" (MAHA) movement introduces a focus on food policy reform, including reducing chemical food additives and combatting dietrelated disease. However, the MAHA agenda contrasts with of products purchased both in stores and online. The CPSC announced in its Toy-Related Deaths and Injuries report that nearly 1.6 million dangerous or illegal toys were seized in fiscal year 2024 alone, over 100,000 of which contained dangerous levels of lead. Online shopping has created a more complex marketplace where platforms may not always adhere to the same stringent safety standards as brick-and-mortar retailers. Read our latest blog for tips on how to protect your family from unsafe toys.

Veteran Saves Week Draws Record-Breaking Number of Participating Organizations

Alongside 887 participating organizations, Veteran Saves Week, launched November 12-15, 2024, was a national call-to-action encouraging transitioning service members, Veterans, caregivers, and their families to take control of their financial future. Each day touched on a theme that supported four important areas policies from Trump's first administration, which emphasized food affordability and deregulation. Despite these differences, there is potential for the MAHA agenda to influence Trump's second term, especially given growing public interest in food policy reform. Achieving substantial change will likely require navigating challenges related to regulatory practices and industry opposition.
